5 PLATFORMS FOR YOUNG ARTISTS:

1. Children's Art Museum of India
2. Wet Canvas Forum
3. Steemit
4. Flickr
5. Saatchi Art

"Bring your creativity to life and let it shine in the spotlight."

After all the hard work and countless hours of brainstorming ideas and finally painting that beautiful idea in the most suited way, publishing the art should not be difficult. Posting your art online may not necessarily be to sell your art but rather to build your network- a community of artists with a similar style.

We have compiled the best of the few free platforms that let you connect, progress and build, not just as an individual but as a community. These platforms will help you take your art to the next level.

CHILDREN'S ART MUSEUM OF INDIA

Starting off with our website is only fair! CAMI is a platform "by the children" and "for the children". Your art will have its own moment here. Every artist is unique and every piece of art is worth showing off. At CAMI, you can post your art and see other artworks. It is a community of young artists that helps encourage fellow young artists. So next time when you think of taking your art public, think CAMI.

WET CANVAS FORUM

It is an engaged community of artists. This is the ideal platform for selling your art. This forum is build to connect like-minded people and getting reviews on your artwork.

STEEMIT

It is a new and upcoming player on the block. This is one of the very few platforms where you get paid to post. But the only catch here is "be consistent and post frequently". This is relatively a newer platform so you have a chance to be seen because it's less crowded.

FLICKR

It is an image sharing website where you can upload photos of your artworks. It has been around for some time so you may find it difficult to get any exposure from this platform.

SAATCHI ART

This platform lets you create a free profile and post your artwork. The only issue with the platform is that it is highly competitive making the art showcasing process a bit tedious.
